

Activity Based Working - Flexible room concepts for activity-oriented work!

Journal of Corporate Real Estate:

„The activity-based office concept of the modern office is set to increase productivity through the stimulation of interaction and communication while retaining employee satisfaction and reducing the accomodation costs.“

Source: Journal of Corporate Real Estate, Vol. 13 No. 2, 2011

Sven Wingerter, Director of Eurocres:

„A modern work environment consists of the synergetic overlapping of work activities, employee communication, organizational structures and building architecture. A purposeful data collection forms the basis for optimization of available workspaces, support of collaboration, increasing space utilization and use efficiency.“

Macquarie Group, Sydney, Australia:

“The benefits of the new system for one company were substantial: 50% reduction in use of paper, 25% cut in energy consumption, $1 million savings annual by doing away with desktop computers, office furniture and landline phones. The Macquarie Group estimated total savings of $10 million for one office building. Major benefits through improved productivity of staff, though this is hard to quantify.“

Source: © janderson99-HubPages on Macquarie Group Sydney